Project
Challenge

Dear Alumni and Friends:

The cover story on Project Challenge in this issue of the Alumni Magazine is just one example of Stonehill's commitment to education, community partnership and diversity. Project Challenge, established by Mrs. Priscilla Tebbetts of Cohasset, Mass., and Stonehill, in cooperation with the Brockton Public Schools and Massasoit Community College, offers an "adopted" class of inner city junior high school students an "opportunity of a lifetime" - the chance to obtain a College education. The College is working hard to ensure that the results of this distinctive new program will fulfill the dreams of many students and bring an enriched dimension of culture and ethnicity to the Stonehill Community.

The College welcomed veteran campus police officer Kevin Callahan as the new Campus Police Chief and Director of Campus Police and Safety in July (see story on page eight). Chief Callahan will enhance his affiliation with the College in May when he receives his bachelor of arts degree in criminal justice at Commencement.

The Alumni Association honored Father Arthur Joseph Colgan, C.S.C. '68, whose profile begins on page five, with its Outstanding Alumnus Award at a ceremony held in January at Stonehill. Father Colgan is the first alumnus who is a member of the Congregation of Holy Cross to receive the award. He traveled from his home in Peru where he serves as Superior of the Eastern Province's District of Peru, to Stonehill for this special occasion.

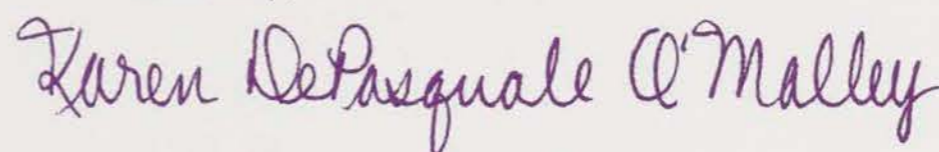

In place of the traditional Faculty Profile, in this issue Professor Robert Rosenthal of the economics department proudly shares a personal tribute to his daughter, Natalie, which he wrote and read at her Bat Mitzvah ceremony. The gathering in celebration of this milestone in her life was held at Stonehill.

The Gaudete Medal is awarded annually to employees of the College who have reached their twentieth anniversary of service at Stonehill. The medal was first awarded in 1984 and to date, ninety-two individuals have been honored. At this year's event, Father Robert Kruse, C.S.C., '55, Executive Vice President at Stonehill, gave a memorable homily at the Mass, which is presented on pages ten and eleven.

Many great things are happening at Stonehill, more than we can relate to you in these pages. Throughout the year, as you continue to hear from various offices of the College, keep in mind that we want to hear from you too. Please send us your updated career and family information, as well as ideas you think we should hear about.

Best wishes from all of us in the College Relations office for a happy and healthy year ahead.

Sincerely,

Karen DePasquale O'Malley

Project Challenge

An Educational Opportunity for Local Students

— by Karen D. O'Malley —
and George J. Hagerty '75

Project Challenge founder and co-sponsor, Priscilla Tebbetts (left) and Stonehill's new Director of Intercultural Affairs and Project Challenge Coordinator, Jean Hamler.

When a group of thirty-three Brockton, Mass., eighth graders visited Stonehill in October with their parents and guardians, they thought they were about to attend a dinner with their friend and tutor, Mrs. Priscilla Tebbetts. As if the attraction of a college campus and the invitation of a close friend were not enough, the students learned that they would meet and hear from New England Patriot's football star Greg McMurtry, a Brockton High School alumnus. McMurtry, "one of their own," was to speak on pursuing excellence and achieving success in life.

What was captured in the television lights that evening was more than they could have imagined. In a world too often given to superlatives, their presence that evening — and the announcement of which they were a part — were truly "life changing."

After McMurtry delivered an inspirational message, Mrs. Tebbetts rose to tell the students of their value and the hope she held for their future. With the audience drawn to her heartfelt message of faith and goodwill, she then made the announcement which had kept everyone in suspense for the evening. She directed her remarks to the students and told them that she, in cooperation with Stonehill, had established a program that would make them eligible for full scholarships to Stonehill and/or Massasoit College.

The first reaction was stunned silence. Then, as the significance of Mrs. Tebbetts' announcement was fully comprehended, expressions of excitement, a celebration both joyful and sustained permeated the hall. As the evening drew to a close, parents and children, now cognizant of the "life" opportunity before them—embraced. Amid the confusion of television cameras and reporter's questions, families found friends among the crowd and spoke excitedly above the din. Each family searched to thank Mrs. Tebbetts and sought out Father MacPhaidin. What was announced that night was Project Challenge.

Project Challenge is a long-term program of support and affirmation for these Brockton eighth graders, the majority of whom currently attend the city's East Junior High School. The program will work with them through the remainder of their public school years. Upon graduation from high school, each participant in Project Challenge will be eligible to receive a full-tuition scholarship to attend Stonehill and/or Massasoit Community College in Brockton, providing that they meet admissions requirements. Massasoit, along with the Brockton Public Schools, are partners in this enterprise with the project's co-sponsors, Mrs. Tebbetts and Stonehill.

"The program is being designed to motivate, encourage and support the students to strive for success," according to Mrs. Tebbetts. In this context, this offer is not an ironclad guarantee that the students will go to college. "We are making the challenge, but it really depends on what they are willing to do," she explains.

The seeds for Project Challenge were sown in 1989 when Mrs. Tebbetts proposed a supplemental education program to the Brockton Public Schools. She sought to volunteer her time in support of students through a range of academic, remedial, and cultural enrichment activities. The Brockton schools were more than willing to accept her offer and invited her to work with a fifth grade class enrolled in Paine Elementary School. Over the course of that first year, Mrs. Tebbetts grew close to her students, devoting considerable time, talent, and energy to the children's education. The class,

"adopted" by Mrs. Tebbetts reflected the rich cultural and ethnic diversity found in the Brockton community.

Mrs. Tebbetts continued to serve these students through their elementary years and further, maintained an active involvement in their development as they entered junior high school. Inspired by other initiatives to assist inner city students, such as the well-known "I Have a Dream" program established by philanthropist Eugene Lang in New York City, Mrs. Tebbetts approached the former principal at the Paine School, Mr. David Swift, about the possibility of securing a co-sponsor to help her develop an opportunity for these students to attend college.

Mrs. Tebbetts approached Stonehill College after abandoning negotiations with several potential private and corporate co-sponsors. The result of her proposal to the College is Project Challenge, a long-term commitment by Mrs. Tebbetts and Stonehill to ensure that the students with whom she worked so closely are afforded every opportunity for success in life through quality secondary and postsecondary education.

While other potential co-sponsors indicated that the scope of the program Mrs. Tebbetts was promoting was perhaps not a substantial enough step in contributing to increased opportunities for inner city youth, she never shared that opinion or became doubtful of her mission. Dan Kulick '53, former Assistant Superintendent of Schools in Brockton met Mrs. Tebbetts and suggested that she approach Stonehill with her proposal for Project Challenge.

At Stonehill, Mrs. Tebbetts found people who shared her enthusiasm for this project. "Stonehill believes in the personal touch," says College President Father Bartley MacPhaidin, C.S.C., "and we felt that we could give these students the attention and encouragement that they need. We applaud Mrs. Tebbetts for her initiative and generosity. Through our commitment, we endorse this program completely. Over the next several years, we will be seeking additional financial support to ensure that Project Challenge is a first-rate enterprise."

The motivation behind Mrs. Tebbett's involvement in Project Challenge is inspirational. She had wanted "to do something of this nature" for a number of years. During her tenure as a hearing officer with the state Department of Public Utilities, which she left several years ago, Mrs. Tebbetts dealt with many low income families and she developed a "soft spot" for the plight of the children of these families. She developed a desire to become involved in some kind of project which would offer educational opportunities to young people that may have been out of their reach economically. In the course of her job with the state, she encountered many families from Brockton, and this was her main impetus for choosing the Brockton Public Schools as the school system for which she volunteered.

The program is distinctive because it demands of all parties, individuals and institutions of higher education, active day-to-day collaboration in support of each child's education. Through educational support, mentoring, and financial assistance, Project Challenge will build upon the talent and potential of the members of the "adopted" class. The program also recognizes the influential role of parents and guardians in the academic and social development of adolescents and young adults. Therefore, when possible, Project Challenge will involve parents in the planning and implementation of this long-term educational program.

Over the course of the next five years, Project Challenge will play an important part in the lives of the young people who wish to take advantage of this opportunity. Included in the program will be mentoring programming (involving Stonehill undergraduates and other community members as Project Challenge mentors), after school tutoring, summer programming (on Stonehill's campus), and post-secondary financial assistance.

Program participants and their parent(s) and/or guardian(s) have entered into a written agreement with the Project Challenge co-sponsors. This agreement, which includes an individualized educational plan, will be updated and renewed annually. This agreement clarifies the responsibilities of parents/guardians in ensuring the active involvement of their children in all Project Challenge activities.

Coordinating the program is Stonehill's new Director of Intercultural Affairs, Mrs. Jean Hamler. An Advisory Board comprised of Mrs. Tebbetts, and representatives from Stonehill, Massasoit, and the Brockton Public Schools, as well as a parent representative, meets monthly to monitor the progress of the program.

Mrs. Hamler is enthusiastic about the opportunity that Project Challenge presents to the junior high school students who she calls affectionately, "The Challengers," and the experience that the program affords the Stonehill students in becoming involved as mentors and tutors.

"As mentors and tutors in the program, Stonehill students serve as role models and help to make Stonehill College more of a reality to these impressionable junior high school students. Stonehill must come to mean more to these future college students than brick and mortar. There must be a clear motivation on the part of the program to make them want to excel, to inspire them to pursue a college degree. The support programs will help to establish a level of comfort for these students, as well as an accepting climate on the campus. In addition, our students are gaining a perspective on diversity firsthand. It is very positive that we have so many students, many of them freshmen and sophomores, interested in active involvement in the program," says Mrs. Hamler.

Mrs. Hamler praises Mrs. Tebbetts for not only acting on her vision of creating a future opportunity for these young people, but also for her regular participation in the program (i.e. continuing to volunteering her time at the schools, as well as her service on the Advisory Board).

"Mrs. Tebbetts serves as a valuable liaison between the students and myself as coordinator of the program. Because she works directly with the students three days each week, she picks up immediately on things that I may not have a chance to observe, whether a particular student is struggling with an issue and the like. In the end, the students benefit greatly from the good communication that occurs among all of us involved in the program," says Mrs. Hamler.

Mrs. Hamler says that as the logistics are worked out for the various components of the program, her role will be one of counseling and motivating the students. In addition, her duties in her new capacity at Stonehill include a responsibility to further sensitize the Stonehill community to cultural and ethnic differences. She serves on the Freshmen Orientation Committee and the Student Affairs Committee, and is an ex-officio member of the President's Committee on Intercultural Affairs.

Mrs. Hamler says, "The campus is becoming a more pluralistic community every day. We have more than sixty students of color on campus now. These students will serve as role models for generations to come. Further diversity of student organizations and courses introduced in the curriculum will evolve as the College continues to carry out its goals for diversification. My job includes becoming involved in initiatives that serve as constant reminders that diversity is real. When a position opens on campus, I will ensure that the College goes the extra mile to interview people of all backgrounds. At all times, only qualified individuals will be considered. I will also assist student government in diversity efforts."

And of course, Mrs. Hamler, along with Mrs. Tebbetts and all who are involved in Project Challenge are committed to working closely with the students involved in Project Challenge for the next four years.

Outstanding Alumnus 1992

Fr. Arthur Joseph Colgan, C.S.C. '68

—by Martin McGovern—

Having spent almost half of his life in the service of the Holy Cross apostolate in Latin America, Fr. Arthur J. "Bud" Colgan, C.S.C. '68 is recognized today for the service he has provided to the Catholic Church of Peru. Known for his sharp intellect, his spirituality, his diplomacy and his devotion to helping the poor, this priest from Stoughton, MA commands widespread respect for his dedication to building a Catholic Church that is at the service of the poor.

This past fall, Fr. Colgan's many contributions to the life of the Church in Peru convinced the Alumni Council to choose him as the 1992 recipient of Stonehill's Outstanding Alumnus Award. As such, Fr. Colgan, 46, is the first member of the Congregation of Holy Cross to be so honored by the College. The Outstanding Alumnus Award was presented to Fr. Colgan in late January when he was visiting the United States.

According to Helene (Donnelly) McGovern '79, Chairperson of the Awards Committee, Fr. Colgan was selected because of his many personal accomplishments and as a tribute to Holy Cross for all that the Congregation has given to Stonehill since the College was founded in 1948. Given that 1991 marked the 150th anniversary of the Congregation's arrival in North America, the Awards Committee felt it was important to recognize the Holy Cross tradition.

"Fr. Colgan," said McGovern "epitomizes the commitment of the Holy Cross Fathers and Brothers to helping others. His many years of service in a violent and neglected part of the world are reflective of the willingness of Holy Cross religious to give of themselves unselfishly. As alumni, we take pride in the Holy Cross legacy which not only gave Stonehill its foundation but also continues to project a positive image of the College and the Church to the wider world."

Along with a handful of other Stonehill alumni who work in Peru as part of the Holy Cross apostolate, Fr. Colgan is spreading the name of the College beyond its New England base.

When asked about being chosen as an Outstanding Alumnus, Fr. Colgan replied with characteristic modesty, "While I am pleased and proud to have been chosen for this honor, I would like this award to give recognition to my fellow religious from Stonehill who have also contributed greatly to the Holy Cross presence in Peru." And he was quick to mention those Stonehill colleagues with whom he works closely — Fr. Thomas Shea, C.S.C. '64, Fr. James Phalen, C.S.C. '73, Fr. Robert Baker, C.S.C. '66 and Fr. William Persia, C.S.C. who did not graduate from Stonehill but who studied at the College as a seminarian.

Today, as Superior of the Eastern Province's District of Peru, Fr. Colgan gives direction to the Congregation's outreach in one of the most impoverished countries in the world. This is the second time in which Fr. Colgan has been elected by his fellow religious to lead the Province's apostolate in Peru. For three years in the late seventies, he also served as District Superior.

Active in numerous community and pastoral projects in the teeming slums that circle the capital of Lima, Fr. Colgan has contributed to the theological and pastoral movement born of the Second Vatican Council and the Medellin Latin American Bishops Conference. This movement prompted the Catholic Church to side more strongly with the poor. Through his work as a theological advisor to the Peruvian Bishops' Conference, he has contributed to several Pastoral Letters which have grappled with the social and political problems facing the country.

As a young man growing up in America's turbulent sixties, Arthur Colgan was inspired by Pope John XXIII's call for the Church to be a "church of the poor" and to dedicate personnel and resources to serving the people of Latin America. Bright and articulate, he finished Boston College High School in three years and won a full presidential scholarship to attend Boston College.

After his freshman year at Boston College, Colgan decided to transfer to Stonehill where he thrived in his new environment. By the time he graduated from Stonehill,

Father Arthur Joseph Colgan, C.S.C.

Canto Grande parishioners march for peace.

Colgan had gained distinction as a philosophy major.

According to Stonehill's 1968 Commencement Program, Colgan was singled out for three separate academic awards — the graduate with the highest scholastic average, the highest ranking graduate in liberal arts, and the highest average for all courses taken in philosophy.

In a recent telephone interview from Peru, Fr. Colgan looked back on his years at Stonehill and identified several of his professors as major influences on his life.

"Fr. Robert Kruse," he said, "was my theology teacher and his classes gave me a vision of a renewed Catholic Church at the service of the world. Fr. Thomas Feeley's enthusiasm and concern for ethical questions impressed me greatly, as did Fr. J. Peter Royal, whose commitment to intellectual rigor taught me how to think clearly.

"In addition, Judy Sughrue had a passion for history and she had just returned from a trip to Yucatan, Mexico. Her classes sparked my interest in Latin America, as did Joyce Collins, who gave me an excellent grounding in Spanish."

During the mid-sixties, Colgan interrupted his Stonehill studies for a year to participate in the formation program at Holy Cross Novitiate in Bennington, VT. Within a year of graduating from Stonehill, he was studying for his Licentiate in Theology at the Catholic University of Santiago, Chile.

During the late sixties and early seventies, political and social tensions between rich and poor deeply divided Chile. The way the Chilean Catholic Church sided with the poor and downtrodden in the midst of upheaval and repression impressed Colgan. That experience, combined with his continued religious formation during a period of new direction for the Church in Latin America, made him a strong advocate of the "preferential option for the poor."

As Fr. Robert J. Kruse, C.S.C. '55, Executive Vice President and Colgan's former teacher, comments, "Bud is deeply committed to his pastoral mission and it is no accident that his commitment found expression through service in the poorest slums, where the need is greatest."

One week after Salvador Allende's government was overthrown by General Pinochet in a military coup, Colgan took his final exams at the Catholic University in Santiago, which he passed with customary honors. Two weeks later, he left Chile and headed home where he was ordained on October 23, 1973 at Holy Cross Church in South Easton, MA. Before long, Fr. Colgan was again back in Latin America, this time serving as a young pastor in the parish of Santa Cruz in Chimbote, one of Peru's poorest cities.

In Chimbote, Fr. Colgan established a pattern of apostolic work that encompassed a rare combination of pastoral outreach, parish administration, sacramental activity and theological reflection. Unflappable and always measured, he soon won the endorsement of his fellow religious who in 1976 elected him District Superior.

"Bud Colgan has a wonderful capacity to be critical without being offensive and he possesses remarkable equanimity," relates Fr. Kruse, who has seen Fr. Colgan in action at Provincial and at General Chapters of the Congregation of Holy Cross.

By 1978, Fr. Colgan directed the Communications Office for the Prelature in Chimbote. In 1979, he was appointed Vicar General of Chimbote. After three years in that position, he transferred to Canto Grande on the outskirts of Lima. Canto Grande is a sprawling slum of over 500,000 people, many of whom had been displaced by poverty in the Peruvian Sierra and more recently by political violence. (Stonehill's Campus Ministry, through its Rice Bowl program, raises funds which assist the pastoral endeavors of the Canto Grande parish).

With the exception of a sabbatical year in 1988 as a Visiting Scholar at St. Michael's College, which is part of the Toronto School of Theology, Fr. Colgan has been based in Canto Grande since 1982. There he spends his time serving as a parish priest, administering the sacraments, assisting in the formation program for Holy Cross' Peruvian seminarians, supporting educational programs and solidarity efforts among the poor (soup kitchens, community based health programs, etc.) and overseeing the apostolic religious life of Holy Cross in Peru.

High on his agenda is justice for Peru's indigenous and Mestizo peoples who have suffered centuries of discrimination and prejudice. He is also a passionate advocate of developing a strong lay leadership within the Church. The Canto Grande parish runs a three-year training program for lay leaders with some 150 men and women enrolled this past year. Fr. Colgan promotes the philosophy that the poor should empower themselves and give life to the social teachings of the Church.

Several mornings each week, Fr. Colgan also travels from Canto Grande to downtown Lima where he serves as a theological advisor to the Peruvian Bishops' Conference. In that position, he has contributed to many Pastoral Letters on topics such as "The Church on Narcotics Traffic," "A New Peru: A Task for All," "The Plight of Peruvian Children" and "The Displacement of People and Political Violence."

Despite the grinding poverty in Peru and the ever-present terrorism, which on occasion has been directed at foreign missionaries, Fr. Colgan and his fellow Holy Cross religious are committed to staying and to keeping solidarity with ordinary Peruvians during these crises.

While the situation is difficult and often uncertain, Fr. Colgan takes satisfaction from the progress made by his neighbors in Canto Grande and by their refusal to give into the isolation that comes with deprivation and terror.

"Slowly the quality of life will improve," he said, "as they get more organized and take greater responsibility for their lives. With that empowerment comes a renewed sense of dignity. Seeing people grow and develop in this way greatly encourages me."

Several sources stressed that Fr. Colgan's work makes a valuable contribution to Church thinking and pastoral direction. A sympathetic listener with a patient style, Fr. Colgan inspires confidence, helps build consensus and increases trust at times of great conflict.

"Bud Colgan knows how to get things done in Peru," said Fr. James Lackenmier, C.S.C. '61, President of King's College in Wilkes-Barre, PA, who spent several months in Peru in 1988, "and what's more, the Bishops there have confidence in his judgment and intellectual ability. They trust his advice."

Fr. Colgan gives a blessing at an outdoor dedication ceremony.

Fr. David Farrell, C.S.C. '64, who is the Provincial Superior of the Eastern Province of the Congregation of Holy Cross and who was a close colleague of Fr. Colgan when he first went to Peru, identifies Fr. Colgan's ability to combine action with reflection as one of his strongest traits.

"Everything that Bud Colgan does is grounded in his own grass roots pastoral experience. A superior leader, he is very good at analyzing problems and pointing to solutions. He has the ability to draw the best from both theory and practice. That's what makes him so effective as an advisor to the people in Peru and to the broader church on such issues as lay participation," observed Fr. Farrell.

"Bud Colgan," says Lee Cormie, Professor of Theology at St. Michael's College in Toronto and an authority on Latin America and Catholic Social Doctrine, "is among the pioneers in developing a new type of pastoral presence."

On his trips to Peru, Professor Cormie has seen the warm acceptance that the people of Canto Grande have extended to Fr. Colgan and he admires his ability to interact with people at a variety of levels.

Cormie stresses, "It is hard for people in North America to understand the magnitude of suffering in Peru and the atmosphere of despair that accompanies such suffering. To live and work amid those conditions, as Fr. Colgan has been doing for so many years, is to give remarkable witness to the need for social justice. By his presence and dedication there, he conveys the message that it is important not to give up hope."

On Wednesday, January 20, Fr. Bartley MacPháidín, C.S.C. '59, presented Fr. Colgan with the College's Outstanding Alumnus Award at a ceremony hosted by the Alumni Council in Alumni Hall.

On that occasion, Fr. Colgan was joined by his parents, Arthur and Marie Colgan of Plymouth, his sisters Margaret Karns-Riley (who graduated from Stonehill in 1968 with her brother) Marie Shibley, Rosemary Ash and Ann Marie Ferris, other family members as well as many friends, colleagues and Holy Cross confrères.

On that day, both family and friends gathered to celebrate the achievements of Stonehill's 16th Outstanding Alumnus, Fr. Arthur J. Colgan, C.S.C. '68, a man who has devoted his life to serving those who are in need.

A Talk With the New Director of Campus Police and Safety

— by Karen D. O'Malley —

Most graduates at a college commencement ceremony are concerned with receiving their diplomas, thanking their parents and families, and moving on to their respective jobs or maybe graduate school. One graduate at Stonehill's 42nd commencement ceremony in May however, will be preoccupied with ensuring the safety and well-being of all graduates and visitors to the campus that day.

Chief Kevin Callahan '93, Director of Campus Police and Safety, succeeded James Best this past summer when Best retired after many years of service to the College. Having taken classes through the Evening Division for fourteen of his twenty years on the Campus Police force, Callahan will graduate with a bachelor of arts degree in criminal justice from Stonehill College in May. He will then join the ranks of the 12,656 alumni, 9,549 of whom have graduated since he came to Stonehill.

Callahan, a Raynham resident and the proud father of three children, Shane 12, Shannon, 10 and Meaghan, 8, found his niche at Stonehill and has worked his way to the top position in the Campus Police department. Without prior experience in law enforcement and on the advice of a friend who told him of an opening at Stonehill, he began his career on the Campus Police force in 1972 as a part-time security officer. He enjoyed the nature of the work immensely and before long assumed a full-time position in 1973. He worked the midnight to 8 a.m. shift for six years, after which he worked the day shift for nine years. Callahan was appointed sergeant in 1988.

As a result of his experiences at Stonehill, Callahan knows students, faculty, administrators, alumni, employees, and Evening Division students on a first-name basis. And he has come to know the campus inside and out, which is essential since Callahan is now responsible for security on the sprawling Stonehill campus - over 600 acres when College property and that of the Congregation of Holy Cross are combined. Each semester the campus is home to more than 1,400 resident students as well as members of the Congregation of Holy Cross, many of whom live on campus year-round. The College's work force numbers over 500 employees who come to campus every day, along with a sizeable population of commuting students. In addition, as the location for numerous community events and productions, Stonehill attracts and welcomes a constant stream of visitors to campus.

Furthermore, there are more than forty major buildings on Stonehill property. Many of these buildings house expensive items and sophisticated equipment, everything from computers and athletic equipment to artwork, which need constant protection.

The Campus Police department is an unarmed professional police force with all the rights and responsibilities of warranted police officers. This means that the officers have the same authority as local police officers, but that authority is limited to the Stonehill campus. Stonehill's Campus Police is comprised of thirteen uniformed officers, and six auxiliary officers, who provide foot and cruiser patrols twenty-four hours a day.

All uniformed officers complete a seven-week training program run by the Massachusetts Association of Colleges and Universities Public Safety Directors, staffed by state police officers. Callahan believes it is important for all members of the Stonehill Community to understand that today campus police departments are professionally organized.

"It is good for students and others to know that they are not dealing with a watchman or security guard. Officers can and will make arrests, if a situation warrants it. We treat each incident in a responsible and professional manner," says Callahan.

Callahan explains that Campus Police is guided by a philosophy of community service. In addition, he has an open-door policy for any member of the Stonehill Community who would like to speak to him on any topic.

"We give top priority to ensuring safety in dormitories and residence areas and we work closely with the Office of Residence Life to promote better security procedures. However, we also provide many other services that contribute to a better quality of life on campus. We are constantly trying to familiarize members of the Stonehill Community with our duties as Campus Police. For example, we give a Campus Police presentation at the freshmen orientation program at Stonehill each year. We have begun a crime prevention program, headed by our Crime Prevention Officer, Sergeant David Correia. Currently, he is setting up a program involving a representative from the Massachusetts Bay Transportation Authority who will come in to speak with the students on safety in the public transit system. I think that's important because many students come here from small towns and don't know about Boston subways. It's good for them to know. Another program in the works is a presentation on home safety procedures," Callahan says.

"Sergeant Rose Linwinczuk, one of three female officers in the department, runs self-defense classes in the dorm areas several times each semester. I think that any program that is made available to students, faculty, and staff is helpful, whether it is learning how to burglar proof your home, locking your doors, or rape awareness programs. We gear our programs for students, but we are also concerned about faculty and staff," Callahan notes.

Callahan is well-known on campus for his typically low-key demeanor. At the same time, he is equally recognized as fair but firm in his dealings with members of the Stonehill Community and visitors to the campus.

"If I come on too strong, people are going to get defensive and nothing will be accomplished. I think dealing with people in a nice easy manner is the best way to go - I try to treat people as I want to be treated. Occasionally it doesn't work and you step it up a little bit, but I prefer to start with that level. It's worked for me all these years."

Although Callahan has made the transition from sergeant to chief with relative ease, shouldering all of the responsibility for campus safety is not a charge he takes lightly.

"In the capacity of chief, I am on call twenty-four hours a day. The officers know how to reach me. We have two sergeants who handle the nightshift and they take care of the majority of the problems. If they need to get in touch with me at any time, they will. I arrive on campus at 7 a.m. and read the daily shift reports. I am briefed by the officers who have been on night shift duty as well. The rest of the day can be anything, there is no such thing as a 'typical day' in this business. I receive calls from students and parents on a variety of issues. I serve on a number of committees. I am also the Safety Officer of the College which requires the monitoring of Occupational Safety and Health Administration regulations, federal guidelines, state regulations regarding the safety and well-being of the people on campus and making sure we meet official standards," says Callahan.

"I have been very lucky over the years. As sergeant, I was basically second in command and Chief Best kept me well-informed as to what was happening on campus. These responsibilities are not a surprise to me, but they are definitely a challenge, perhaps more than I thought they would be. I welcome the challenge. I'm very lucky that I have good people to work with - it makes the job easier."

Callahan has also witnessed the considerable growth of the campus firsthand. He attributes his longevity at Stonehill to both the appeal of the field of law enforcement and to the College itself.

"Since I've been here, the people at Stonehill have been fantastic. The College is a pleasant place to work. The cooperation of the administration, and from peers, has always been great. There's a sense of community here. Keeping the campus and the people here safe from harm gives me a sense of accomplishment. We have an enviable safety record which gives us a real sense of achievement. It means we are doing a good job."

With the recent charge of the 1990 Crime Awareness Security Act, Stonehill, like colleges and universities all over the United States, is required to publish campus crime statistics regarding the following crimes: rape, robbery, aggravated assault, breaking and entering, and automobile theft. The new law is designed to give students and parents an accurate picture of the safety and security of college and university campuses.

In addition to the crime prevention programs, Callahan says, other services provided by campus police on any given day or night are transportation services for students crossing campus at night, assistance during medical emergencies, directing visitors to campus, weekend roadblocks to enhance security, unlocking doors for students who lose their keys, and helping with disabled vehicles.

"Our activities include a number of things that people do not think of ordinarily. We not only enforce the rules and regulations of the College but we also provide service to the community. We are here twenty-four hours a day for people — students, faculty, staff, alumni, parents and visitors to the campus," says Callahan.

While Campus Police is on duty around the clock, the officers can only be in so many places at one time. Callahan encourages members of the Stonehill Community to help the department by reporting anything that seems suspicious and communicating any concerns to him.

According to Callahan, "Campus Police is here to protect Stonehill College people and property. It's great when everything is running smoothly, but realistically you must be prepared for anything. We are not a closed society, we are open to the outside, so anything could happen, as in any community. I think our department works with that idea in mind. All of the officers are well-prepared and on their guard at all times. We encourage members of the community to assist us by contacting Campus Police at any time with questions regarding security issues on campus."

Callahan plans to continue helping the campus community as well as visitors for many years to come. "I've made Stonehill my career - I really do not see myself leaving the College. After twenty years, I feel that there are still many challenges here and a lot of work to do. As I've often said, in this business there's something new every day. I deal with events that are happening twenty-four hours a day. This is not a mundane job. Even when I was uniformed, I knew the routine things I had to do, but there were always other challenges as well."

All indications are that the safety of the campus is in good hands with Chief Callahan in charge, and equally important, Stonehill looks forward to welcoming him to the Alumni Association this spring.

Gaudete Liturgy

by Father Robert J. Kruse, C.S.C.

We gather this evening to celebrate the Third Sunday of Advent which for many centuries was known as Gaudete Sunday — from words of Paul's Letter to the Philippians (4, 4-5) read at that Mass: Gaudete In Domino semper. Rejoice in the Lord always; Iterum dico gaudete. Again, I say rejoice. And it is an occasion of particular rejoicing at Stonehill, since it is at this liturgy each year that the College extends special recognition and appreciation to those who have reached their 20th anniversary of service. Tonight we so recognize and thank the Chief of the campus police force, Kevin Callahan, who makes us all feel more secure as we go about our work and Professor of English and of Irish Literature, Frank Phelan, who makes us all feel less secure as he introduces us to James Joyce and other modern writers. We truly rejoice in what each of them does to enrich the life of the campus.

On an occasion such as tonight's, we are struck by the sense of time's passing, and by the changes that attend the passage of time. However, I prefer to speak this evening not about time which passes but about place which — on the surface at least — gives the appearance of not passing, but of remaining, the appearance of permanence and of constancy.

When Bartley asked me to prepare a homily for this Gaudete Mass, I happened to be reading Cormack McCarthy's novel All the Pretty Horses. A scene in that novel got me thinking about the influence of place in our lives. The hero, a young Texan, is talking with a band of Mexican cowboys.

"He sat and smoked with them and told them all that had happened...they were saddened that he was not coming back but they said that a man leaves much when he leaves his own country. They said that it was no accident of circumstance that a man be born in a certain country and not some other and they said that the weathers and seasons that form a land form also the inner fortunes of men in their generations and are passed on to their children and are not so easily come by otherwise." ⁽¹⁾

The weight attached to place in this passage struck me, the notion that our inner fortunes are formed by "the weathers and seasons" that form the land we live in. It occurred to me how much attention biographers give to place in their lives of men and women, and even to the places that parents and grandparents had known, the scenes, so to speak, of their making and being made. How extensively literature is dominated by the sense of place. We cannot imagine Huck Finn on the Hudson but only on the Mississippi. We cannot imagine Willa Cather's Pioneers anywhere but on the Great Plains.

I thought of the early lines of Yevtushenko's Zima Junction, the railroad town where he had lived as a boy.

"My life has often been by backward glances,
.. touching the same ground
where you first moved barefooted, kicking up dust.
I rely often on this ordinary thought:
near Lake Baikal my own town waiting for me.

And the wish to see the pines again,
mute witnesses of time and its distance, of my great grandfather and of the others in exile here after a peasant's rising." ⁽²⁾

After years of absence — with experience of a much different life — he returns to the place from which he came. At the end of the long poem he describes the close of his visit:

"I...strolled through Zima Junction one more time.
... .. I passed the last house, climbed into the sun, and for a long time stood on the hill-top looking across at the station buildings and farmhouses and barns.
And the voice of Zima Junction spoke to me and this is what it said.

'I gently steam with engines.
But not without reflection on these times,
these modern times, my loving meditation.
Don't worry. Yours is no unique condition,...
don't worry if you have no answer ready to the lasting question.
Hold out, meditate, listen.
Explore. Explore. Travel the world over. ...
...
Love people.
Love entertains its own discrimination.
Have me in mind, I shall be watching.
You can return to me.
Now go.'

I went," the poet ends his poem,
"and I am still going." ⁽³⁾

We come to this place, to these acres that are Stonehill College, from many places, some from nearby and some from far away. Wherever we come from, we bring something of there to here. And Stonehill is much the richer for all the places its many people bring to it. But from the time we arrive, this becomes our place, and "the weathers and seasons that form a land" begin also to form our "inner fortunes."

The "weathers and seasons" are literally the sopping heat of summer and winter's brutal winds. They are spring's flowers on a thousand trees and shrubs and autumn's solemn parade of passing colors. The "weathers and seasons" are the grounds on which we walk, the ponds we walk around, the woods and fields that surround us, the moody sky above us. They are the overbearing midday sun of July and the sharp-angled light of a December afternoon, its muted color everywhere. And the "weathers and seasons" include what we do with all of these—how we place a human imprint on the place that nature lends us for our use and for our pleasure.

There are "weathers and seasons" of the inner life as well and these, above all, make a place the place that it is. How to describe the climate in this place? The question is so big, one hesitates to say anything. Allow me to risk only a few remarks. I think that Stonehill has been characterized by restraint in its claims, by a dislike for showing off and for pretension. Perhaps the lack of financial resources during much of its history helps to account for this characteristic.

However that may be, Stonehill has also been a place where people worked hard and worked together and did not regard any work as beneath them. There was always a job to be done: our own education and the education of our students—education in the fullest sense of the term; intellectual, spiritual, and moral education; education to personal growth and to social responsibility. Other agenda were consistently subordinated to these tasks.

People here did not stand on their dignity; they had neither time nor sympathy for class distinctions. It seems to me that the climate in this place has been one of mutual respect and support. This has held sway regardless of differences and conflicts that inevitably arose from one season to another. A ceremony such as tonight's awarding of Gaudete medals underscores how much what we do here is a work of mutual cooperation and respect. In the future, as Stonehill moves to welcome students, faculty and staff from more diverse backgrounds, it will be important to nurture this characteristic which has helped the College weather so many storms in the past.

My remarks have focused on Stonehill as a place with its own climate and its own seasons. I began by noting that traditionally this Sunday, the Third Sunday of Advent, has been called Gaudete Sunday, a Sunday for rejoicing as the community of believers draws near to its annual celebration of the Birth of Jesus.

In the conversation between Jesus and a Samaritan woman recorded in John's Gospel, the woman says: "Sir, I can see that you are a prophet. Our fathers worshipped on this mountain but you Jews say that the Temple where God should be worshipped is in Jerusalem." In reply to her, Jesus said: "Believe me the time is coming when you will worship the Father neither on this mountain nor in Jerusalem ... the time approaches, indeed it is already here, when those who are real worshippers will worship the Father in spirit and in truth." (Cf. John 4, 19-23).

It is not that the mountain in Samaria and the Temple in Jerusalem have lost their character as holy places. It is rather that every place has become potentially a holy place. That is why at the death of Jesus the veil of the Temple separating the Holy of Holies from the outer courts where secular affairs were conducted was torn from top to bottom. Everything human holds possibilities for holiness and every place is potentially a holy place. I think that Stonehill is a holy place and it is a holy place because we try to do eminently human things here.

I close these thoughts with two passages from well-known books. The first is from Salinger's Franny and Zooey. Towards the end of the book with equal measures of affection and exasperation, Zooey says to Franny:

"If it's the religious life you want, you ought to know right now that you're missing out on every single goddam

The Gaudete Medal (above) is presented to Stonehill employees in recognition of twenty years of service to the College.

religious action that's going on around this house. You don't even have sense enough to drink when someone brings you a cup of consecrated chicken soup—which is the only kind of chicken soup Bessie ever brings to anybody around this madhouse. So just tell me, just tell me, buddy. Even if you went out and searched the whole world for a master—some guru, some holy man—to tell you how to say your Jesus prayer properly, what good would it do you? How in hell are you going to recognize a legitimate holy man when you see one if you don't even know a cup of consecrated chicken soup when it's right in front of your nose? Can you tell me that?"⁽⁴⁾

The second passage is from the closing lines of Bernanos' The Diary of a Country Priest. The central figure lay dying and the narrator is waiting for the arrival of another priest to administer the last rites.

"The priest was still on his way, and finally I was bound to voice my deep regret that such delay threatened to deprive my comrade of the final consolations of our Church. He did not seem to hear me. But a few moments later he put his hand over mine, and his eyes entreated me to draw closer to him. He then uttered these words almost in my ear. And I am quite sure that I have recorded them accurately, for his voice, though halting, was strangely distinct. 'Does it matter? Grace is everywhere' ... I think he died just then."⁽⁵⁾

Amen. Grace is everywhere. Not least in this place, on this campus of Stonehill College, where so many gathered here tonight have served so long and so well.

Stonehill Trivia

Remembering The Crosier Club

Katherine (Flynn) Coyne '65, (standing, center), and classmates presented "Christmas in Killarney," a Crosier Club production in 1963.

Stonehill became coeducational in 1951, enrolling 19 women undergraduates. Currently, there are 1,089 women in the day program, which accounts for 56% of the entire enrollment. The College counts 5,891 women among its alumni body. The spirit of volunteerism that today inspires more than 500 Stonehill students to give of their time and effort to the eleven service organizations on campus was in full force among the early women pioneers at the College who established the "Crosier Club at Stonehill College" in 1953. All undergraduate women were automatically enrolled as members of the Crosier Club upon matriculation at the College. The club was moderated by the Dean of Women and organized to coordinate religious, service, social, and recreational activities for women on campus. Annual events included the Christmas Open House, ice skating and hot dog roast, Father-Daughter Dinner, Crosier Club vs. B.M.O.C. basketball game, Mother-Daughter Tea and Fashion Show, induction ceremonies for new members, a picnic at King Phillip's Cave and various athletic events. The club also raised funds for the "Stonehill College" sign on Route 138, participated in the Foster Parents Plan, and gave a Christmas party for the orphans at the Myles Standish State School in Taunton. The club thrived for fifteen years and its activities were often written about in the Summit. An editorial in the November 1955 Summit read in part: "With hardly a foot in the door, [women] began to organize. Now they have their own Dean, their own lounge, their own athletic teams, and their own club, the club with the largest membership on campus." The Crosier Club stayed in existence until 1968, when it was replaced by another women's organization, the Donataire Society. The Donataires eventually merged with the men's service organization, the Purple Key, to form the current Ames Society, a service organization comprised of both men and women undergraduates at Stonehill.

A Tribute to My Daughter

by Professor Robert Rosenthal

On the occasion of my daughter's Bat Mitzvah, and in keeping with the custom of parents sharing some feelings with their child, the following narrative expresses some of my thoughts that wonderful day and was read before a gathering of family and friends. I might add that it often occurs at a moment when those closest to the child are greatly relieved as it follows years of preparation allowing the child to chant in Hebrew a portion of the Torah.

Introduction

Natalie, as you no doubt already know, this is a very special day. While you may have already attended what seems at least to me like several hundred Bar and Bat Mitzvahs, your day, this day, occurs but one time. Only once, will you be called up to the Torah in this context, only once will you celebrate a thirteenth, or maybe even any birthday, in such grand style; and only once will you be so much a captive to have to listen while we talk to you, and about you, in front of your sixty closest friends.

I remember when you were little, or at least considerably littler, but old enough to know about Jews and non-Jews; and you were asked on the Stonehill College campus one now distant mid-December, whether or not you were anxiously waiting for Santa Claus. Your response was no, or at least you shook your head sideways. "Why not?" the questioner asked. You said, "He's already at the mall." And so, even before you knew about and loved The Gap, the Limited, etc., your world was beginning to center around the mall.

We Make Mistakes

Parents in general, and particularly yours Natalie, do not like to acknowledge that they may have made a few mistakes along the arduous and uncertain path called child rearing. Nevertheless, when you consider that Mom and I combined have accumulated roughly forty years of education, you'd think we might have been prepared. Not so! No, we never took a course in bringing up baby. What's even more ridiculous is that we went to school once a week for about three months just to get you into this world, but never went to school afterwards to figure out what to do with you once we got you here. For sure, we read books on all the right ways to do things, but, it's not surprising that we really learned by doing and made a few bad calls along the way. So, in this public forum, I thought it would be appropriate to apologize for at least one of those moments of bad judgment.

I am thinking of the time in Northern France, when we stopped at a countryside bistro for lunch. Mom and I were eager to relax after a long drive with a fine meal and a glass of wine. You were not feeling well and like most kids who don't feel well (or even those who do feel well), dining at a French bistro in the early afternoon was not exactly where you wanted to be. Well, you were our big girl, so after you started to misbehave (whining, kvetching, you know the standard restaurant stuff when parents want to relax), I lost my patience and quickly removed you from the restaurant, and then actually lectured you for about five minutes on proper restaurant behavior in foreign countries (especially France); and I behaved as if international opinion of the United States was dependent on your acting like a grown-up when we went back into the restaurant. It worked - but at the age of one year and four months, I now believe that you were a little young for that lecture. I apologize from the bottom of my heart and hereby discard the guilt that I dragged around for these past 11.7 years.

Natalie Rosenthal

More generally, you could and have accused both of us, in different ways and at different times, of having expectations that perhaps stretch the boundaries of what might be reasonable. There are few if any guidelines that I know of to help us sort out what those expectations should be. Until such an instruction booklet exists, one that is tried and proven, I think it would be fair to say that we'll go on being perhaps imperfect but probably erring on the side of expecting too much and not too little. In fact, you've given us no choice, because with the stuff that really matters you have never failed to meet or exceed our expectations. For balance, however, we have to be more aware of all you do, and less tuned in to the tidiness of your living quarters.

The Meaning of Today

I would like to think that as this time approached you would contemplate perhaps some inner or personal meaning of the day's events. Realistically, however, I've grown comfortable with the fact that that will come to you later in life, when you are more able to reflect with a few additional years behind you. After all, how can one reflect, ponder or even spell one's own name with decisions about dresses, invitations, DJ's, contact lenses and other monumental events such as taking off the braces and planning a big party!!

But, you were not the only one needing to search for some philosophical content of this day's events. We did as well. For me, Natalie, the fact that you are my daughter, my only daughter and are standing here, is something that I just recently understood well enough to appreciate. In part, I was inspired by an article that appeared in a recent issue of Hadassah, a magazine of reform Judaism, sent to me by your grandmother, which discussed the origins of Bat Mitzvahs in the United States. And while I would like to share just a bit of this with all of you, we must first look back to an experience you had, Natalie, during your earlier years at the Alternative School.

Perhaps you remember that day back in second grade I think, when your principal invited you and several other students to join him for lunch. You came home after school and I asked you how you enjoyed the event. You said 'okay except that he let the boys go out for recess afterwards and we, the girls, had to stay behind and clean off the tables.' You knew something was wrong with that, but you also felt a little helpless to say or do anything about it. So when you shared it with me, and my eyes began to roll, you begged me not to send my letter of sharp protest. Such events can sometimes be subtle and when so, they are difficult to address. But when obvious, as in this case, you have long since learned to recognize their unfairness and have demonstrated a willingness to speak up. So how does this all relate to today's event?

Way back in 1922, Rabbi Mordecai Kaplan was a bit more visionary than your elementary school principal in 1986. It was his daughter, Judith, whose first U. S. bat mitzvah ceremony, that year, was probably more influential than any other. But it wasn't really until the last two decades that some recognition toward the equality of women has spurred the proliferation of the bat mitzvah ceremony, among Reform, Conservative, and even Orthodox synagogues. And so, as I would like to believe, the bat mitzvah is more than just a ceremony and a party. It is an occasion for you, a happy one I hope, signifying that while you are no longer a child and not quite an adult, you must begin to redefine your relationship with your community and the larger society. It is reassuring for me to know that from this pomp and ceremony, you do so right alongside your male counterparts with more equality and more opportunity than even a few years ago!! I am confident that you know this and can act on it, and I am optimistic that among the majority of those with whom you must begin to interact in these new ways, they too will accept these changes.

Natalie, you are a wonderful child, not just because you're ours, but because we see firsthand, and endlessly hear from others (whether they be teachers, camp counselors or the parents of other children), of the joy you bring into the lives of those around you. That has been overwhelmingly true for us, for Jesse, for your grandmothers and great grandmothers, aunts and uncles and for the grandfather you knew too briefly who saw you with his heart if not his eyes. For the grandfather you never knew, one can only imagine how he would have smothered you with love and affection and how proud and overwhelmed he would have been today. Time has passed and so now, there is another Bob in your life, granny's new husband, who too adores you.

As you enter this exciting if uncertain time of your life with yes, wider boundaries, but ever expanding responsibilities, Natalie Rosenthal, continue to be yourself, shoot for the stars, never stop smiling, be kind to those around you, think about what's genuinely "not fair" and...try to speak a bit more slowly! We love you more than you can measure, and as my mother told me on too many occasions - Wait until you have your own, then you'll know. Mazel Tov!

Private Choices, Social Costs, and Public Policy: An Economic Analysis of Public Health Issues
Praeger Publishers, 1992

Students from Nancy Hammerle's Economics of Social Issues and Public Policy class will remember that she frequently commented on the lack of an appropriate text for the course. While not primarily a text, Professor Hammerle says that her book fills some of that void.

The book treats the most timely compelling and provocative social issues of today including cigarette smoking, substance abuse, infectious disease, racial disparities in health and mortality, children-at-risk, and teenage pregnancy and childbearing. These are essentially public health issues and all have a common thread: they involve individual behavioral choices that have far-reaching and costly external effects. For example, the decisions to smoke cigarettes, abuse alcohol, practice unsafe sex or take drugs during pregnancy impacts not only on the individual directly involved, but also on all of us. Practiced on a large scale, it taxes our health care system, challenges our social service system and strains our financial resources. It may also burden our criminal justice system and reduce worker productivity as well.

Drawing upon medical research, behavioral science literature, government sources, corporate reports, staff memos and personal interviews, the book examines the human and fiscal costs that arise from these and other ill-considered behaviors. It also employs economic analytical tools to formulate public policy measures that would either reduce the incidence of such behavior or shift its cost. Some of the recommendations are fairly mainstream; others are decidedly not.

Time for a Change
The Return of the Republican Party in Massachusetts

by Ted Frier and Larry Overlan
Davis Press, 1992

Time for a Change: The Return of the Republican Party in Massachusetts chronicles the fascinating resurrection of the GOP only four short years after its virtual disintegration in the disastrous 1986 campaign. In their useful capsule account of Massachusetts political history, authors Ted Frier and Larry Overlan argue that the erosion of Republican influence coincided with the GOP's neglect of the disciplined and effective Party apparatus traditionally used to counter the Democrats' natural advantages in raw numbers. The authors make a compelling case for the revitalization of the role of parties in the political process, and give particular

College Relations Development

Century Club Dinner

Despite bitterly cold weather, more than 200 members of the Century Club attended the new look Century Club Christmas Reception on Saturday, December 5. The reception—held in the Dining Commons for the first time—is the College's way of expressing thanks to all the members of the Century Club, which remains our largest giving club with over 1,200 members.

President's Dinner

The annual President's Dinner, a popular event on the local social calendar, will be held this year on Thursday, June 3 at the Sally Blair Ames Sports Complex. Last year, the President's Dinner attracted over 600 guests and the proceeds went to support the College's faculty development fund.

Mr. Charles Altieri, President of Auburn Construction Company in Whitman, Massachusetts and a long-time member of Stonehill's Executive Committee for Development, is Dinner Chairperson for the 1993 President's Dinner. For information on the President's Dinner, please call the College Relations Office at 508-230-1344.

Tedeschi Award and Scholarship

Mr. Ralph D. Tedeschi

At the 1992 President's Dinner, Stonehill honored one of its best friends and benefactors, Mr. Ralph D. Tedeschi, patriarch of one of the region's most successful supermarket families, when the College presented him with its prestigious Genesis Award. The Award is given in recognition of talent and creativity.

At the President's Dinner, the College announced the establishment of the Ralph D. and Madeline Tedeschi Scholarship in honor of the family's many contributions to Stonehill.

Parents' Fund

After a successful campaign last year—having raised over $73,000 from 450 parents—the Parents' Fund has set itself another ambitious target this year. The Parents' Fund is working to raise $80,000 and to win the participation of 550 parents.

Cheryl and Joe D'Antonio, who did such an excellent job as chairpersons of the Parents' Fund last year, have agreed to lead the parents' campaign again in 1992-93. Cheryl and Joe are the parents of Stephanie D'Antonio '93.

Town-Gown Committee Established

Stonehill and the Town of Easton have established a Town-Gown Committee which will serve to enhance the lines of communication between the College and the Town. Francis X. Dillon, Vice President for College Relations serves as chairperson of the committee which is comprised of members of the Stonehill community and several town officials.

Frueauff Foundation

The Charles A. Frueauff Foundation, a Florida-based foundation with a long standing commitment to higher education, announced that it would present the College with a grant of $50,000. This generous gift will enhance the Frueauff Scholarship program at the College, which has assisted more than 100 Stonehill students over the past ten years.

The Frueauff Foundation takes a personal interest in the welfare of the Frueauff Scholars at Stonehill. Each semester, Mr. James Fallon '64, a Frueauff and Stonehill Trustee, visits the campus to meet individually with the students who have benefitted from the Foundation's generosity.

W. B. Mason Forum

Andrew Card poses with his new Stonehill sweatshirt presented to him by students and members of the College Relations office.

The Honorable Andrew H. Card, Secretary of Transportation in the Bush Administration and a native of Holbrook, Massachusetts, was the keynote speaker at the inaugural W. B. Mason Forum on the Future of Southeastern Massachusetts at the Martin Institute for Law and Society on October 23.

Card addressed more than 125 local business people, government officials, dignitaries and entrepreneurs who attended the Mason Forum and spoke about the region's transportation needs and challenges in the years ahead. The W. B. Mason Company of Brockton has committed itself to this innovative forum which bears its name and which will address—at a business breakfast held twice a year in the Martin Institute—an issue selected for its importance to the future of the region. In support of the Forum, the Mason Company is making a gift of $60,000 to the College which will be given in amounts of $12,000 each year for the next five years.

A Gift for the Martin Institute from Mr. Edward Martin

Edward E. Martin

Mr. Edward E. Martin, brother of the late Speaker of the U.S. House of Representatives, Joseph W. Martin, after whom the Martin Institute for Law and Society is named, has made a gift of $50,000 to the College. Mr. Martin's gift will support the Martin Institute's annual Lecture Series.

Fish Memorial Scholarship

Mrs. Elizabeth A. (Porelle) Fish '64, of North Attleboro, has established a scholarship in memory of her beloved husband, George R. Fish, who was also a member of the Class of 1964.

Golfing for Scholarships

In September, Stonehill and Massasoit Community College in Brockton joined forces with the Brockton Rotary and the Brockton Kiwanis to sponsor a successful golf tournament. The event helped raise funds for scholarships at both Stonehill and Massasoit.

Dr. and Mrs. William Winick Symposium on Catholic-Jewish Relations

Dr. William Winick of Brockton has made a gift to Stonehill to establish The Dr. and Mrs. William Winick Symposium on Catholic-Jewish Relations at the College.

An interfaith forum, The Dr. and Mrs. William Winick Symposium will be designed to foster Catholic-Jewish dialogue and understanding. The Symposium will be convened biennially at the Joseph W. Martin, Jr. Institute for Law and Society to address an issue of significance to the Catholic and Jewish communities.

Hornblower Fund

The Henry Hornblower Fund of Boston has made a generous gift to the College which will contribute to Stonehill's scholarship program.

The Patty Roche Memorial Scholarship

Through the generosity of Daniel and Eileen Roche, The Patty Roche Memorial Scholarship has been established with a gift of $500,000. Dedicated to the memory of Patty Roche '84, a member of the College's 33rd graduating class, the program will make available a minimum of two scholarships annually. The recipients selected to receive these annual awards will be recognized as Patty Roche Scholars. Academic year 1993-94 will be the first year in which Patty Roche Scholars will be selected.

Presidential Forum for Students

In early November, the College hosted a special Presidential Forum for students. More than 50 students — representing all the classes and most of the major organizations across the campus — attended the Forum. The quality of the questions and comments from the students was outstanding. For over an hour after his address to the students on the state of the College, Fr. MacPháidín answered questions from the audience.

Italian Educational and Cultural Interchange Fund

Gloria E. Distasi, a member of the Class of 1981, has made a generous gift to the College which allows for the establishment of the Italian Educational and Cultural Interchange Fund. Under the provisions of the Fund, a student chosen to study in Italy for one semester will receive funding for airfare and all personal expenses except tuition.

The daughter of Italian immigrants, Distasi said that the Fund grew out of her love for Italy and for Stonehill. While at Stonehill, Distasi, a psychology major, was a founding member of Beta Xi, the honor society for evening division students, and she played an active role in the division's student government.

Horace Howard Scholarship Program

During Academic Year 1992-93, the Home for Aged Men in the City of Brockton has committed to presenting the College a $50,000 award which will fund two important educational outreach programs for students who are senior citizens. During the fall semester, there were close to 60 Howard Home Scholarship recipients. In addition, the Home for Aged Men in the City of Brockton also funds the Howard Home Series in the Humanities, an innovative program designed to appeal to the needs and interests of older students.

Academic Development NSF Grant

Michael A. Horne, Professor of Physics at Stonehill, has received a grant totalling $443,000 over the next three years from the National Science Foundation to study quantum interference, both theoretically and experimentally.

Professor Horne works with a research group which consists of Anton Zeilinger at the University of Innsbruck, Danny Greenberger at City College of City University of New York and Herb Bernstein at Hampshire College. The study will focus on multiparticle interference with photons and on single particle interference with neutrons. The experimental work will be conducted mainly at the Experimental Physics Institute in Innsbruck and at the Institute Laue-Langevin in Grenoble. Some experi-

Steve Lynch '68

Ida, Frank, and Mary Lynch Oral History Program

Stephen Lynch '68 has made a generous gift to the College which established the Ida, Frank and Mary Lynch Oral History Program at Stonehill. The Program, which is named in honor of his parents, Frank and Mary Lynch and his aunt Ida Lynch, will sponsor the production of an oral history of the College. This project is already in progress through the efforts of Professor James Kenneally and Fr. David Arthur, C.S.C. The program also sponsors events such as the play "Cody! An Evening with Buffalo Bill" which was performed in Hemingway Theatre on September 22.

ments will be conducted at the National Institute for Standards and Technology laboratory in Gaithersburg, Maryland. Much of the theoretical research will be carried out at Stonehill by Professor Horne who collaborates with his colleagues via phone and fax.

MFH Grant

Joyce M. Collins, Associate Professor of Spanish, and Judith A. Sughrue, Associate Professor of History, have been awarded a grant from the Massachusetts Foundation for the Humanities which will help fund a year-long program on the Columbian Quincentennial, "Encounters: The Meetings of Different Cultures." This exciting series began in October.

USIA Grant

In June, the College received notice that its application to the United States Information Agency for a grant under the Samantha Smith Memorial Exchange had been successful. The grant of $35,000 will help to fund the Yaroslavl-Stonehill Student Exchange Program.

C.S.C. Scholarship Gift

Over the course of this year, the Eastern Province of the Congregation of Holy Cross will present the College with a gift of $80,000 in support of a scholarship program which will assist Stonehill's plans to recruit, retain and serve minority students. This is the second year in which the Eastern Province of the Congregation of Holy Cross has made such a generous gift to the College.

Pires Scholarship

Mr. John Green, a local resident, has established a scholarship in memory of his friend, Mr. James Pires, who died in a plane crash late last year. The James Pires Memorial Scholarship will be awarded annually to a high school graduate of the Easton or Brockton high schools. Mr. Pires is remembered fondly by his many friends and relatives in the Brockton-Easton community. A graduate of Brockton High School, Mr. Pires resided in Brockton for most of his life and was well-known for the support he gave to youth programs in the city. This scholarship is a fitting and lasting tribute to his memory.

Oteri Scholarship

The family and friends of Mark Oteri '88 have established a scholarship in memory of Mark who died suddenly last summer. Well-known and liked by his classmates and friends, Mark was also dearly loved by his family. This scholarship is seen as a way in which Mark's memory will be honored and perpetuated.

Alumni Fund

The Alumni Fund has set a dollar goal of $450,000 and a participation goal of 36% for 1992-93. Under the chairmanship of Brian McKenna '80 and with the cooperation of many alumni class agents, volunteers and students, the Fund is working hard to reach this year's goal. Last year, the Fund exceeded its goal of $400,000. The Fund campaign ends on June 30 and contributions are always welcome.

Mastronardi Foundation Gift

The College has received a grant of $10,000 from the Mastronardi Foundation in New York. Given as an unrestricted gift, the contribution is part of a multi-year commitment from the Foundation to the College. Mr. Nicholas Mastronardi, Vice President of Merrill Lynch, is a member of Stonehill's President's Club. Both his children, Edward and Valery, are Stonehill graduates.

Alumni

Phantom of the Opera

On September 17, over 150 alumni, friends and family members attended a magnificent performance of the award winning musical The Phantom of the Opera at the Wang Center in Boston. It was a memorable evening for all who attended.

"Miss Saigon"

One hundred alumni, friends and family members enjoyed the Tony Award winning musical Miss Saigon on October 8. The performance was held at the Broadway Theatre in New York City. All who attended found the event quite memorable.

Annual Cross Country Fun Run and Reception

On October 25, the Stonehill College cross country teams hosted their annual invitational meet. For the second year in a row, a group of cross country and track alumni dusted off their running shoes for the five mile course. The drizzle and overcast skies did not dampen the spirit of the participants as over sixty runners finished the men's race and over thirty-five runners completed the women's race. A reception concluded the day's festivities.

Alumni Hockey Game and Reception

The Annual Alumni Hockey Game and Reception was held on October 31. Thirty alumni played in the high scoring game. For the second year in a row, the players from the odd numbered graduating years beat those from the even years. Forty-five people, including the players and their families, attended the post game reception which was held in Alumni Hall. Peter Powers '87, head coach of the Stonehill team and an alumni player, organized this event.

Alumni Weekend

Hayrides were a popular activity among alumni and their families!

A cruise of Boston Harbor for young alumni aboard the MV Massachusetts served as the kickoff for Alumni Weekend which began on Friday, October 2. On Saturday, over 1,000 alumni returned to campus to take part in a fun-filled day of festivities which included an Open House at Alumni Hall, campus tours, and a seminar entitled "Job Search Strategies." The highlight of the weekend was the Oktoberfest which took to 0. The day concluded with "Stonehill Night at the Irish Embassy Pub" in Easton. On Sunday, October 4, alumni soccer players challenged the Stonehill team at the Annual Men's Alumni Soccer Game. The Women's Soccer Alumni also held a game as part of Sunday's festivities. Alumni were invited to Mass in St. Mary's Chapel and a brunch at the Dining Commons on Sunday to conclude the weekend's activities.

Career Fair at Stonehill

"Third Annual Career Fair" alumni participants.

Forty-two alumni representing seventeen major career fields returned to Stonehill on October 29 to share their expertise with students at the Third Annual Career Fair. The Fair, sponsored by the Office of Alumni Affairs, the Career Services Office and the Student Alumni Association, attracted over 200 students.

Alumni Mass of Thanksgiving

The Eighth Annual Alumni Mass of Thanksgiving was held in November at St. Mary's Chapel. More than 200 intention cards were received and offered at the Mass celebrated by Father Jack McCarthy C.S.C., Alumni Minister.

Financial Planning Seminar

On October 29, the Office of Alumni Affairs sponsored a seminar on "Financial Planning '92." Attended by over 140 alumni, the seminar featured four guest speakers: Walter "Buzz" Herlihy '68, an independent financial planner; Chris Giannaros, an associate with Baystate Financial Services; Bill Lehmborg, Senior Vice President of Baystate Financial Services; and Robert Glovsky, co-host of "The Money Experts" on WHDH Radio. Topics of discussion included principles of financial planning, protecting your future, investing for education and retirement, and "The Money Experts" program's Most Relevant Questions for Today's Economy.

Members of the Class of 1988 Reunion Committee met in Alumni Hall to plan their Fifth Year Reunion in June.

Washington, D.C. Area Mass And Brunch

Pam (Hudson) '66 and Bob Beggan '66 opened their home in Alexandria, VA for a Mass and brunch for alumni who reside in the Washington, DC area. Twenty-five individuals, including alumni and their families, attended the Mass in November which was offered by Father Tom Looney, C.S.C. '82, a graduate student at George Washington University. Anne M. Pollick '88, Associate Director of Alumni Affairs, updated the alumni about the College.

Straight Talk From Alumni

Brian Hoffman '77 makes a presentation during a workshop on campus. Fellow alumni participants Heather Crowley '92 and Jennifer Slade '91 co-presented the workshop.

On November 17 and 19, alumni Brian Hoffman '77, Vice President/Partner of Winter, Wyman & Company, Heather Crowley '92, Marketing Specialist Assistant for Reebok, and Jennifer Slade '91, Software Consultant for Meditech, offered a two-part workshop, "Straight Talk from Alumni on Finding a Job." The program took place in the Dining Commons and was sponsored by the Office of Career Services and the Student Alumni Association. Topics important to the job search including resume writing and networking were discussed. Many Stonehill juniors and seniors took advantage of this opportunity to learn about the mechanics involved in landing their first job. This popular program will be offered again in the spring.

Alumni Council Fall Meeting

The Alumni Council's Annual Fall Meeting was held on October 24 in Alumni Hall. Officers elected at this meeting began serving three-year terms of service in January. The newly elected officers are: Neil O'Leary '61, President; Charles Bartolini '81, Vice President; and Lynn McGuire '84, Treasurer. Outgoing officers are: Catherine Sabaitis '75, President; Cheryl (Noonan) Noblin '71, Vice President; and Charles Bartolini '81, Treasurer.

Alumni Golf Tournament

On Saturday, September 26, Stonehill College hosted its 8th Annual Golf Tournament at the Easton Country Club.

One hundred-eight golfers braved inclement weather to participate in the Fall outing. With a score of 5-under par, the foursome of John Murphy '69, Bill Oleksak '70, Tom Keefer '70 and Fr. Jack McCarthy, C.S.C. tied the foursome of Chuck Kane '86, Dave Sullivan '86, Brett Kane '87, and Joe Beak '86. After a comparison of scores on individual holes, the Murphy group was declared the tournament champion.

The day's highlight was a hole-in-one by Kirk Coffua, brother-in-law of John Kelly '89 on the course's 140-yard par-3 14th hole. Mike Sarro '86 won the longest drive contest on the 18th hole. Next year's tournament is scheduled for Saturday, September 18 at the Easton Country Club. Mark your calendars now!

Atlanta Area Reception

On September 9, the Office of Alumni Affairs sponsored the first Stonehill reception in Atlanta, GA. The reception, which was held at LaPaz Restaurante Mexicano, provided the alumni in Georgia with the opportunity to meet and network with each other. Anne M. Pollick '88, Associate Director of Alumni Affairs, answered the numerous questions that alumni had about the Stonehill of today. Sixteen alumni attended this event which was enjoyed by all.

Chicago Area Reception

Twenty Stonehill alumni representing a four-state region, gathered at Kennessey's Cypress Restaurant in Hinsdale, IL on September 13, for an afternoon of fellowship and networking. Stonehill administrators Father Jack McCarthy, C.S.C., Alumni Minister, and Tim Lawlor '81, Director of Development, attended the reception and updated the guests on current Stonehill happenings. The event gave alumni from this area an excellent opportunity to socialize and to stay informed about their alma mater.

Cody! An Evening with Buffalo Bill

The first event of the Ida, Frank and Mary Lynch Oral History Program at Stonehill was the play, Cody! An Evening with Buffalo Bill, performed in Hemingway Theatre on September 22. Stephen Lynch '68, established the Oral History Program in honor of his parents, Mary and Frank Lynch, and his aunt Ida Lynch. The Alumni Office sponsored this visit to campus by Eric Sorg to perform this stunning one-man show based on the life and times of the legendary William "Buffalo Bill" Cody.

Mark Oteri Memorial Golf Tournament

The family and friends of Mark Oteri, Class of 1988, are planning a golf tournament in Mark's memory on Tuesday, May 18, 1993 at the Wayland Country Club. Proceeds from the tournament will go to a scholarship fund established by Mark's family and friends at Stonehill.

Campus News

Honors Program

The Honors Program at Stonehill is sponsoring five events this spring semester. On February 9, College Organist and Professor of Fine Arts, Daniel Lamoureux, gave a lecture on musical history and theory entitled "Musical Rebellion: Imagination and Fantasy in the Work of Selected Keyboard Composers." Later in February, the TheaterWorks Company of Boston will present a dramatic program on the ancient Greek poetess, Sappho, entitled "The (In)Complete Works of Sappho." On Monday, March 1, TheaterWorks will perform a dramatic reading of Sophocles' Antigone. Late March events include a "Leadership Workshop" for Honors Scholars and "Jeopardy! Night."

These spring programs cap off a series of eight events sponsored by the Honors Program this academic year. Approximately sixty students are currently designated Honors Scholars at Stonehill. As Honors Scholars, they are enrolled in honors sections of Philosophy and Religious Studies in their freshman year. The developing goal of the Honors Program will be to offer a four-year intensive educational experience through selected courses and special academic and artistic evening events. Currently, in the freshman year, the Honors Program focuses on developing students' understanding of the fundamental sources of Western Culture, the Greco-Roman and Hebrew-Christian traditions.

The Honors Program is coordinated by Associate Professor of Philosophy, Richard Capobianco and Assistant Dean for Academic Services, Richard J. Grant. The evening events sponsored by the Honors Program are free and open to all members of the Stonehill Community, as well as to the general public.

Barbara Baranowski '93 and Derek Brown '93 received the newly established Ronald J. Fraser Award from Professor Charles Curran, associate professor of communication at the annual Honors Assembly. Ronald Fraser was a professor of speech and director of theatre arts at Stonehill from 1960-1977.

Father Bartley MacPháidín, C.S.C. Receives Honorary Doctorate

Father Bartley MacPháidín, C.S.C., addresses the graduates, faculty and administration on the occasion of his being awarded an Honorary Doctor of Humanities degree from the University of the Holy Spirit, Lebanon.

Father Bartley MacPháidín, C.S.C. received an Honorary Doctor of Humanities degree from the University of the Holy Spirit, Kaslik-Lebanon in July. The following text is from the citation which he received from Father Louis Hage, President, University of the Holy Spirit.

"In this harvest season where the grain has sufficiently ripened to serve as new seeds of promise, the University of Holy Spirit of Kaslik, attentive to the Spirit which moves the world, has the joy of discovering a kindred spirit in Reverend Father Bartley MacPhaidin, President of Stonehill College, Massachusetts, (USA). The breadth of his knowledge and culture, the depth of his thoughts as a humanist and as a theologian, the richness of his academic and administrative experience, his friendships with important people in high places throughout the world, and finally his three prior doctorates lead the University of Holy Spirit of Kaslik to award him a new Doctorate Honoris Causa in Philosophy. In showing him our highest esteem, we salute also the noble land of Ireland where the honorable Fr. MacPhaidin has his roots and the United States of America which celebrates the 216th anniversary of its independence on this Saturday, the 4th of July."

Nakamichi Concert Series

The Nakamichi Concert Series continues its schedule this spring with concerts scheduled for: February 22, Vincent Stringer, a vocalist who will perform gospel, arias, and classical music; March 23, Daniel Lamoureux, College Organist and member of the Fine Arts program at Stonehill, who with guest organists will perform selections that accent a baroque organ; and April 13, Eos Ensemble, which will perform chamber music, from baroque to the 20th century. All performances are free and open to the public, and are sponsored by the Nakamichi Foundation and Stonehill.

Into the Streets

Father Dan Issing, C.S.C., (standing second from right), poses with some of the student volunteers who participated in the "Into the Streets at Freshman Orientation" program.

Stonehill challenges its students to give of their talent, ability and knowledge not just in the realm of academics, but also in the cause of community service. Every year, the College is pleased by the generous way in which students respond to its challenges. One new program in particular "Into the Streets," is providing students with added opportunities to become involved in service.

"Into the Streets" is a national community service program which was initiated at Stonehill in January of 1992, under the direction of Father Wilfred Raymond, C.S.C. Father Daniel Issing, C.S.C., Acting Director of Campus Ministry, currently coordinates the program. "Into the Streets" is designed to introduce more students to thoughtful community service and to provide a learning experience that will encourage them to volunteer on a regular basis. Each semester, several students work as interns in Campus Ministry to direct the "Into the Streets" program. The program strives to challenge students to think more about the social and economic issues which confront society and ways to improve human community. By the fall of 1995, all Stonehill students will be introduced to the concept of community service through "Into the Streets."

A major accomplishment this past year was the production of "Into the Streets at Freshman Orientation." Under the guidance of Fr. Issing, three Stonehill student interns organized the program which took all 500 members of the incoming freshman class into the surrounding neighborhoods of Stonehill College, communities which know poverty, illiteracy, drug addiction, and family and community violence. The freshmen were divided into orientation groups of about twenty students and travelled by bus to one of twenty-four social service agencies participating in the program. Each orientation group was accompanied by one of more than thirty College personnel who also participated in the program, as well as upperclassmen already involved in community service. Each agency examined the issues they confront in their work and how they deal with these issues. The agencies, which included charitable and youth organizations, soup kitchens, nursing homes, homeless shelters, and a learning disabilities center, provided tours of the facilities and discussed ways for students to get involved. At the agencies, Stonehill students had the opportunity to meet the people there, get a glimpse of their pain and their work, and help in their service.

As "Into the Streets" begins its second year, plans call for efforts to mainstream the concept of community service into the regular life of the College. In February, the program sponsored Community Service Week on campus, a week-long series of events to promote community service, to increase enrollment in on-campus groups and off-campus service, and to express gratitude and congratulations to those already involved. Events included a Celebration of Service Ministry at Mass, An Evening of Reflection on Careers in Service, "Why get involved in Community Service: A Conversation with Barbara Whelan," (Executive Director of Bridge Over Troubled Waters in Boston), and Community Service Celebrates.

A course in theology reflection, Theology and Community Service is being developed by Professor Peter Beisheim of the religious studies department and Father Kevin Spicer, C.S.C. '87. Additional plans for the spring semester include gathering all the agencies who have participated in "Into the Streets" so far together for a meeting to strengthen their affiliation with the College. Plans are also well underway for the second "Into the Streets Freshmen Orientation" program in August.

An auction of donated items (conducted above by Stonehill seniors Kristen Wollenberg (left) and Jennifer Murphy, held at the College in December, raised funds for the "Wednesday Academic Club for Kids" (WACK), a new program taking place at the Nehemiah Life Development Center in Brockton. The program brings Stonehill students and other adult volunteers together with local elementary school students for tutoring sessions each Wednesday evening. Members of the new organization include approximately twelve Stonehill education majors and several adult volunteers, who organized the fund raiser auction. About thirty elementary school students are currently involved in the weekly tutoring sessions.

credit for the victories in 1990 to GOP State Chairman Ray Shamie, whose defeats in the U. S. Senate races of 1982 and 1984 convinced him of the need for repairing the decrepit Republican Party machinery.

The authors detail the strategy used by Republican William Weld and running mate Paul Cellucci to capture the Party's nomination for governor and lieutenant governor, and then to later defeat Democratic maverick John Silber in the general election. Also examined are the critical blunders made by Michael Dukakis and his fellow Democrats following Dukakis' decisive loss to George Bush in the 1988 presidential election. Frier and Overlan discuss the acute public dissatisfaction with the Democratic Party's handling of the fiscal crisis of the late 1980s. Combined with the widespread belief that Democrats had sacrificed the interests of the state to elect Dukakis president, the public anger over the record tax increase, budget cuts and collapsed state credit rating, produced a volatile compound on election day as voters announced it was "time for a change."

Flying

The Edwin Mellen Press, 1992

Flying is a collection of 49 lyric poems. There are poems about growing up, love, time, tornadoes, and the homeless. Many of these poems lead to a realization which is at once surprising and inevitable. They are written in spare, direct language enriched by metaphor and imagery. Taken together, they form an attempt to bring our lives into focus.

CLASS NOTES

is wearing two hats these days. First, he is the Director of Community Relations for the Strategic Defense Initiative (SDI) project at the Pentagon. In this position, he responds to inquiries from people in the communities, colleges, civic organizations, industry and others. Second, he is the founder and proprietor of a ten-acre vineyard in Virginia's Shenandoah Valley. More about that later.

Dick has worked in various capacities for the federal government since graduating from Stonehill in 1953. In addition to his on-again, off-again thirty-two year career as a federal civil servant, Dick has been a congressional candidate, a featured show business performer, father of ten and grandfather of nine. "I guess you can say I'm a people person," says Dick.

Upon graduation from the College, he went to work for the federal government. He caught "Potomac fever" and returned home to Massachusetts to run for Congress. After losing the general election, he worked for Governor Foster Furcolo for two years before deciding to return to Washington to work on Capitol Hill for U. S. Senator Hartke, and later as a member of the Kennedy and Johnson administrations. A talented entertainer since his Stonehill days, Dick moonlighted as a singer in Washington, DC area clubs in the early 1960s. He appeared several times on the "Tonight Show" after a writer on the show heard him sing and invited him to appear as a guest. In 1968, Dick was offered a television show by WETA, Washington's premier public television station. He co-hosted an Emmy Award-winning show called "Where It's At," and ended up as the show's producer before it ended its run in 1969.

In 1970, Dick left Washington for a two-year stint with the Peace Corps Training Center in Puerto Rico. He returned to Washington to be public affairs officer for the NASA headquarters Office of Space Applications.

His interest in the wine business had its start during mid-1970 trips to Vandenburg Air Force Base in Southern California for launches of polar orbiting satellites. When missions were scrubbed or delayed, he took the opportunity to visit the small wineries of the Santa Ynes Valley in central Santa Barbara country. "The more I learned about the vineyard and winery business and the people in it, the more it appealed to me," Dick says. "I liked the idea of farming, but the thought of waking up before dawn to milk cows and slop hogs kind of turned me off. Growing grapes was different, and when I discovered that quality wine grapes were being grown in Virginia, I got really turned on to starting a small vineyard and making wine." In 1981, after much study, research and several seasons of weekend apprenticeship in some local vineyards, Dick purchased the Shenandoah Valley acreage that was to become North Mountain Vineyards. He planted 8,000 vines in 1982, selling subsequent harvests to several neighboring wineries. By 1988, Dick decided that the time had come to work on the second half of his dream—a winery. The winery building, modeled after a Norwegian farm house, was completed in 1989 and that year produced the first vintage from Dick's Chardonnay, Vidal and Chambourcin grapes.

"I'm looking forward to hosting a Washington, DC area Stonehill Alumni get together at the winery at the first opportunity," says Dick, adding, "I have saved a case of my first vintage Chardonnay for Father Sullivan, which I'll present to him on our 40th anniversary reunion this spring. He's my idea of a whole man."

Because his job in the federal government occupies most of his time during the week, the winery is open only on weekends and holidays. North Mountain Winery is located in Maurertown, Virginia, about 100 miles west of Alexandria, where Dick lives with his wife, Caroline.

Attached to the top of Dick's Pentagon office door and hand lettered in handsome calligraphy is a quote from John Irving's novel, The Hotel New Hampshire: "It is hard work and great art to make life not so serious." When Dick retires from government service to grow grapes and make wine full-time, the sign goes with him.

Jeanne G. Hamilton '63

"My military career has been challenging and rewarding. When I graduated from Stonehill in 1963, I had no idea that I would spend the greater part of my professional life in the Army. I worked at New England Deaconess Hospital as a medical technician until early 1970 when I decided I wanted to gain greater responsibility, to travel, and meet new people. A two-year tour in the Army seemed to fill that need. Little did I realize that 23 years later I would still be wearing the uniform! I was commissioned a first lieutenant in the Women's Army Corps (WAC) and was sent to Fort McClellan, Alabama for basic training. In 1976, I was assigned to the Adjutant General's Corps (personnel and administration) when the WAC was pending disestablishment. During my career I was assigned to both troop and staff duty. My troop jobs included being the commander of a basic training unit and the executive officer of a personnel battalion in a tactical unit. My staff assignments ranged from being an administrator of an Army school for training personnel clerks to working at the Department of the Army. I had two overseas assignments; one in Germany and one in Korea. I came to appreciate two very different and distinct cultures during these tours. The highlights of my career were being assigned to the 7th Infantry Division at Fort Ord, California (Monterey) from 1982 through 1985, where I was responsible for personnel and administrative support to the installation, and as a personal assistant to the Secretary of the Army in Washington from 1988 to 1990. I am presently assigned to an Assistant Secretary of the Army and am responsible for oversight of recruiting and commissioning policy for the Army. In 1991, I was promoted to the grade of colonel. The military has been a tremendous opportunity for me. I believe the fine education I received at Stonehill was a key element of my success."

is owner, along with her husband, Dean Stewart, of Deer Trail Park Campground in Nekoosa, Wisconsin. They have owned and operated the twenty-seven year-old campground for eight years. Roberta says that "when I received my degree from Stonehill in real estate management (bachelor of arts in college studies), I was thinking more in terms of high rise apartments! But the principles are the same, move-ins, move-outs, maintenance, advertising, accounting, licensing and inspections, personnel, etc., etc., etc..." Roberta did in fact manage an apartment complex in Illinois, her first job upon graduation from Stonehill. In 1973, she married her late husband, Ken Jung. They had one daughter, Kerrie, now a junior in high school, and Roberta was pregnant with their son, K.J., currently in eighth grade, when Ken died unexpectedly in 1978.

Roberta remarried in 1982 and she and Dean have another daughter, Katie, 10. For four years, prior to moving to Wisconsin in 1985, Roberta owned and operated Party Works, a catering and event planning company. Prior to relocating to Wisconsin in the spring of 1985, Roberta and Dean purchased the campground. Deer Trail Park has 149 camping sites on 68 acres. The campground has 142 water and electric hook-ups, as well as seven "wilderness sites" with no utility hook-ups for those campers who really want to "rough it!" The camp hosts 75 "seasonal families," who set up permanent campsites and come and go throughout the year. The campground amenities include a 40-acre fishing lake, a nine-hole golf course, heated swimming pool, convenience store, bath and shower buildings, tennis courts, sand volley ball court, horseshoe pits, and a pavilion where various social and cultural events are held throughout the year. Roberta says that planning interesting and enjoyable year-round activities for the campers is challenging. Planned activities include photography contests, disc jockey entertainment, fishing contests, a Valentine Sweetheart Dance and arts and crafts classes for children. During the slower winter months, Roberta attends many weekend tradeshows throughout the state to promote the campground. Deer Trail Park is a "destination" type of campground, meaning people do not drive by and decide to stay there, but learn about the campground through the tradeshows and advertising. Roberta and Dean are members of the Board of Directors of the Wisconsin Association of Campground Owners, an organization of private campground owners. The organization holds educational seminars, an annual convention, and tours of various campgrounds, among other activities. Roberta serves as the chairperson for the Chamber of Commerce Tourism Committee, and both she and Dean are involved with the Governor's Board on Tourism for the state. Roberta and her family carry out much of the work at Deer Trail Park. Kerrie works in the convenience store, K.J. is very adept at fixing things and Katie, a tomboy, enjoys helping her brother. In the spring additional staff members are hired. Roberta fondly remembers her decision to come to Stonehill. Her mother is a cousin of the late Father John Corr, C.S.C., former president of the College. Family loyalty is what prompted her to apply to Stonehill, but Roberta says that "one look at the campus and I was hooked!" Roberta enjoyed meeting up with Alumni Chaplain Father Jack McCarthy, C.S.C., Director of Development Tim Lawlor and fellow Chicago area alumni when she attended a Stonehill alumni reception in the Chicago area in September, and hopes she will be able to return to Stonehill in June for her twentieth reunion!

Garry R. Greer '78

is a public health microbiologist and the State Laboratory Training Coordinator at the Massachusetts Center for Disease Control (CDC) in Boston. He has worked in the field of public health since earning his degree in biology from Stonehill, and receiving specialized training at the CDC in Atlanta.

In 1991, Garry, who resides in Boston, learned of the holiday needs of children affected with HIV/AIDS through the Children's Hospital AIDS Program. Since that time he has worked to meet those needs by founding and serving as chairperson of "Stuff for Kids," an independent, non-profit volunteer organization providing toys and clothing during the holiday season to children with AIDS, and to children of families affected by AIDS. These items are distributed through the pediatric HIV/AIDS clinics and aids service organizations throughout Massachusetts.

In its first year, the "Stuff for Kids" Project reached over 100 families, distributing more than a thousand toys through the clinics at Boston City Hospital, Children's Hospital and the University of Massachusetts Medical Center. This year, sponsored by Lotus, The Packaging Corporation of America, Reebok, Mutual Benefit Life, Leggat-McCall Properties and boosted by donations from Stride Rite Corporation, Lechmere, Bradlees, Filenes, and New England Telephone, "Stuff for Kids" reached over 1,500 children at nineteen different sites across the state. In addition, the project established Children's Corner Libraries at the Children's Hospital AIDS Program, the Foundation for Children with AIDS and at Children's AIDS Project, a residential home for children with AIDS.

During its week-long collection campaign in early December, the "Stuff for Kids" Project took up headquarters in a 7,000 square foot space on the ground floor of the Park Square Building. Corporations, businesses, merchants, daycare centers, schools, civic and church groups and individuals from Amherst to Hyannis participated in the project's collection of recyclable used toys, new toys and new clothing. It is estimated that donations for 1992 exceeded $100,000 and during the collection week over 50 volunteers helped to sort and package donations.

Betty Klauber, administrative assistant for Children's Hospital AIDS Program, said that Garry's work allows nurses and social workers to do something that they have never been able to do before: play Santa to all of the families in the program. "In some cases," Klauber said, "social workers have been able to deliver bags stuffed with toys and clothing to the homes of the children. For the parents, most of whom are also infected, the toys are a double blessing. Finances become increasing difficult for families with AIDS. As the ability to work decreases, things like toys become almost impossible. For some parents there is also the realization that it might be the child's last Christmas."

Klauber said that while children diagnosed with the disease used to live no more than a few years, newly developed drugs have extended the life span of many. There are now twelve year old children in the program who were born with HIV, the virus that causes AIDS. "Children infected with HIV are like any other children. They love to enjoy life," she said. "Garry is doing more than just giving a child a toy. He is helping children be part of life while they are living."

According to "Stuff for Kids," the ages and needs of children affected by HIV/AIDS are varied and unique. The majority of the children are infants to toddler or preschool age, with many children also in their teens. Winter clothing, educational toys and toys that reinforce cause-and-effect are most helpful. However, all types and sizes of toys and clothing are both needed and appreciated.

The "Stuff for Kids" Project will soon initiate its 1993 campaign, as volunteers begin networking and contacting the businesses and groups who will participate or sponsor the project. Garry welcomes any interested alumni who wish to become involved to contact the "Stuff for Kids" office at (617) 451-3260.

CLASS NOTES

The Campus As An Oasis

Every Stonehill alumnus has a different relationship with the College. Some follow Stonehill's sporting teams. Some attend class reunions. Others get involved with the phonathons, stay in touch with classmates and favorite professors or give career advice to graduating seniors. In the following story, Mike Pelleteri '85, reflects on his relationship with Stonehill.

"Whenever the chaos of the business day mounts and seems overwhelming, there is a small oasis that I often visit. My escape is an expanse of land with green grass, abundant woodlands and friendly faces. Most of all, it provides a temporary escape from the demands of the world.

Some days, the business world is incredibly cruel. It can swat the mightiest of men and women as if they were flies. I have found that we all need to learn how to pace ourselves in our professional lives and in our personal lives. Therefore, when responsibilities begin to weigh me down, I take a time-out from my schedule and head for Stonehill College.

You see, Stonehill means much more to me than the fine education I received while going there. As someone who attended the College as an older, more mature student and as a commuter, I learned to appreciate the richness and the variety of the campus. As a result, Stonehill has become my personal haven. Therefore, on those occasions when the business world has given me all I can take, you will find me on that special campus in North Easton, Massachusetts.

As I drive onto the campus, my entire being changes for the better. I start to relax. By the time I have parked my car under one of the trees at the Big House (Donahue Hall), I am already feeling renewed.

What I do is never planned. Sometimes I look for special friends. Other times, I just walk around enjoying the peaceful busyness of the campus — students walking to class, athletes practicing on the playing fields, people heading to the library.

Typically during these walks, my mind begins to wander. It wanders back to the days when I was a student here and those days seem so wonderful. Memories race through my mind — exams, papers, graduation. I recall cheering for the football team and going to Brother Mike's. Boy, can I remember Brother Mike's!

As my walk continues, my outlook inevitably begins to brighten. The hustle and bustle of the students — along with the quietness and solitude of the grounds — refreshes me.

Pretty soon my walk leads me back to my car. As I drive off the campus, I know that I have to face another day competing in the business world. However, I am regenerated. The relaxation and tranquility act like a tonic. The Stonehill campus has worked its magic again. Better yet, my oasis will be there the next time I need it."

Michael F. Pelleteri, a health care administration major while at Stonehill, is now the President of MEDSTAR, a home health care company which is based in Canton, Massachusetts. Active in student government, Mike served as President of the Commuter Council. He and his wife, Carol, live with their two children, Anthony and Elizabeth, in Taunton.

Mike is just one of many alumni, neighbors and friends who enjoy walking — or running — on Stonehill's beautiful campus.

Nancy (Sylvestre) Cole, a staff writer for the Sun Chronicle, a daily newspaper in Attleboro, earned a second place award in the features category in the Massachusetts Association of School Committee's 10th Annual Gold Star Awards contest, which honors outstanding education reporting. She writes stories for the Schools and Leisure sections and provides other news coverage. Nancy and her husband, Scott, live in Woonsocket.

Amanda Martin-Esker is a graduate research assistant at Wayne State University where she is also completing a doctorate in chemistry. Amanda and her husband, John, live in Oak Park, MI.

Join us at "Forever Plaid!"

at The Terrace Room of the Boston Park Plaza Hotel

You'll love the music if you can stop laughing long enough to hear it!

Stonehill is going Plaid. Forever Plaid is a fresh and funny tribute to the guy-groups of the 50s and 60s. It's the story of aspiring young crooners whose dreams of musical glory come true. Join us for one of the most hilarious shows ever. We've arranged for a special discount for our alumni, their family and friends.

DON'T MISS IT!

You are invited to bring your family and friends to this memorable event on Sunday, March 7, 1993 at 3:00 p.m. Tickets are only $19.00 each and are available on a first-come, first served basis. So, let's go Plaid. To order tickets, please contact the Alumni Office at (508) 230-1343.

You are invited to attend the 19th Annual MERC (Massachusetts Educational Recruiting Consortium) April 21, 22, and 23, 1993

at the

Boston Park Plaza Hotel and Towers
Candidates seeking positions in education are encouraged to participate. A ten dollar fee will be collected at registration. For details and a registration packet, please call the Office of Career Services at (508) 230-1325.
